

R.J. Norgard

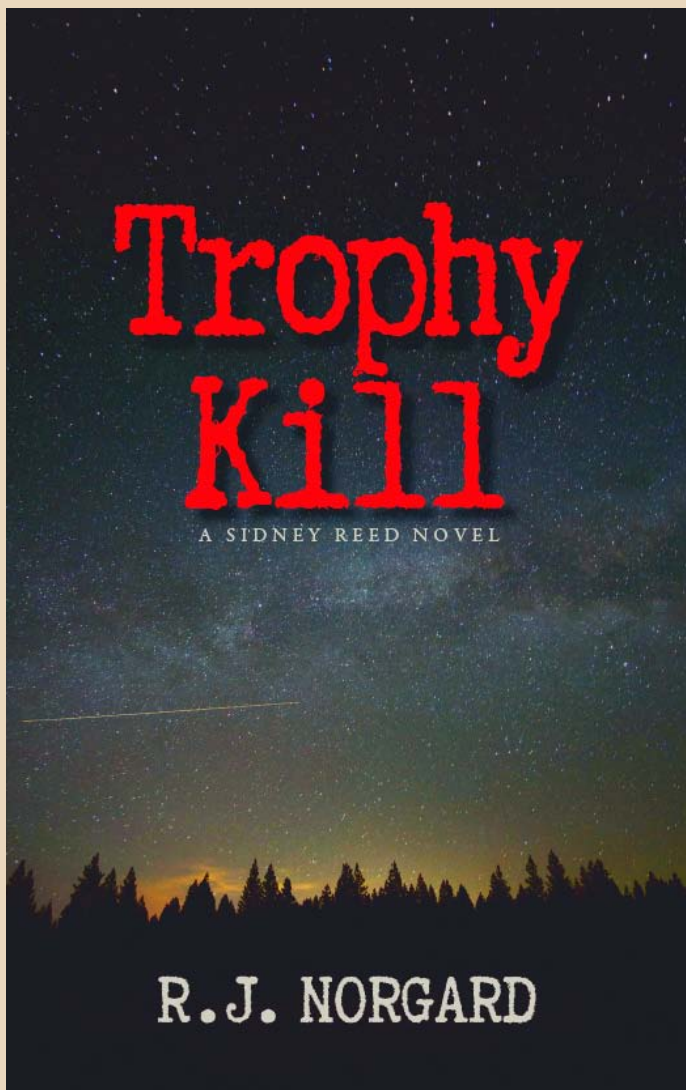

AUTHOR OF THE SIDNEY REED MYSTERY SERIES

“Just as Stieg Larsson's Millenium series is enriched by its Swedish backdrop, R.J. Norgard uses the stark, extreme setting of Alaska to set the tone for his taut thriller. Fans of Larsson's Mikael Blomkvist will make fast friends with P.I. Sidney Reed, the novel's damaged, witty protagonist.”

about me

I grew up so close to Lake Erie, my feet are still wet. I began working as a reporter and photographer for the Port Clinton Daily News, when I was still in high school, learning the ropes from a wonderful managing editor. I went on to a career in the U.S. Army and traveled to places like Kaiserslautern, Germany, and Las Vegas, Nevada, which I thought was too hot. After retiring I went into business as a private investigator in Alaska. This work formed the basis for the character of Sidney Reed in my novels.

I currently live in my hometown close to the Lake Erie shore with my partner, Suzy, and our two cats. In addition to penning mystery stories, I write about local history and the environment.

about the Sidney Reed Mysteries

Trophy Kill is the first in a bold new series of mysteries from Bird Dog Publishing, an imprint of Bottom Dog Press. The series features Sidney Reed, a private investigator based in Anchorage, Alaska, who is living in seclusion following the tragic death of his wife Molly. Despite himself, Sidney finds himself drawn back into his former life, even as memories of Molly continue to haunt him. Successive books in the series will explore how he grapples with guilt and loss as he investigates the darker side of the Last Frontier.
